-We all wear masks, and hide our grievances and ailments as carefully as we can; then we complain of lack of ympathy in others, as though they should discover our griefs by intuition. We cover our best feelings from the light; we do not conceal our resentments and dislikes, of which we are prone to be proud. Often two people sit prone together, with "I love you" in either heart, and neither knows it. Either thinks, "I could be fond; but what use of wasting fondness on one who does not care for it?" and so they part and go their ways alone. Life is a masquerade, at which very few unmask, even to their very dearest. And though there is a need of masking, would we dared show plainly our real faces, from birth to death, for then some few, at least, would truly love each other.

-The Tennessee and Pacific railroad, running from Nashville to Lebanon, distance of thirty miles, is too big an elephant for the Davidson county court to pocket. That body, a few days ago, adjourned without taking any definite action on the matter, and Captain W. M. Marr, in making some remarks to the court, said all the testimony that the court had heard was for one side only The Tennessee and Pacific railroad was in a better condition than any road leading into Nashville. It could also bring freight there cheaper than any other road. The Nashville and Chattanoega road had put up a job to get possession of the road, and they wanted to prove hat it was in a bad condition. Judge Whitworth was interested because he had forty thousand bonds out of a series of one hundred and sixty thousand. He (Captain Marr) had bought every dollar's worth of stock he could get hold of, from three cents on the dollar up, be-lieving in the future of the road. They could sell it if they dared, he would appeal to a higher tribunal and make them pay him dollar for dollar for his interest. They had tried to kill the road by tying the hands of the president, a man they did not like on account of his asso-

-The Batesville (Miss.) Blade has aid us under obligations to it for this handsome and very flattering notice: Since the days when old Father Var Pelt printed the APPEAL on a Washington hand-press, in the village of Memphis, it has been to us, not a luxury, but ne of the necessaries of life. Up to the beginning of the war, in 1861, it was the champion of southern rights-bold earnest and uncompromising in the discussion of Damocratic principles, and unwavering in its support of the interests of the country tributary to Memself and the cause it espoused. Memphis surrendered to the Federal army the APPEAL left its comfortable quarters and migrated with the southern troops, following the fortunes of the Contederate army through evil as well as good report. Throughout the weary campaigns of the war the APPEAL made its daily visits to the campfire and bivouse of the army, nerving us to cheerfully bear the heat and burden of the conflict by its own sacrifices in behalf of a common cause. Since the war its course is fresh in the memory of our people, who now show their appreciation of its honest, manly course, by liberal patronage and hearty welcome t their homes. The APPEAL deserves and should ever have a warm place in the hearts of the people of Mississippi, and we would be glad to see its patrons mul-

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE ST. NICHOLAS for August (the mid-ummer holiday number) is probably the very finest issue of a children's magazine ever published anywhere. In make-up and contents it is specially adapted to the season; and the great varisty and uniform excellence of its contributions are indeed remarkable. All classes of articles are represented, anecdote, adventure, description, sentiment, fun, fancy; and each representative is worthy to rank among the best of its kind. More than twenty articles by such writers as Lucy Larcom, Celia Thaxter, James T. Fields, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Mrs. Dodge, Noah Brooks, Mrs. Oliphant, Lucretia P. Hale, Abby Morton Diaz, Lydia Maria Child, Horace E. Scudder; and more than forty pictures, by such artists as Miss Hallock, Addie Ledyard, W. L. Sheppard, Sol Eytinge, Thomas Moran, Fidelia Bridges, Frank Beard—sil together make a midsummer magszine for children such as was never seen before! All parents desirous of the solid cultivation of their children should be subscribers for the St. Nicholas. THE July number of Ware's Valley Monthly is in every respect the fulfillment of the promises made by its new proprietors, that all the excellencies which contributed to secure it a place among the periodical literature of cur country should be maintained, and new features added from time that would increase its usefulness and strengthen it in the public confidence. The "Fire-Fly," by Lide, formerly a poetic contributor to the SUNDAY APPEAL, justifies the good opinion we long ago expressed of his abilities. "The Land of Sinim," by A. P. l'arker, is a very resdable and in structive, though very short article. The "Second Wife of Napoleon," by Mrs. Maria L. Johnson, is a paper of more than usual strength and purpose and to our thinking, truth-ful as it is forcible in its statements and just in its conclusions. The remainder of the contents help to sus ain the good opinion those named secure for it Terms $3 per year, or thenty-five cents per copy. Address, Marcus J. Wright & Co., proprietors, St. Louis, Missouri. THE "MIDSUMMER HOLIDAY."-ECRIBNER fulfills the promise made by the publishers announcement. A new venture, it will, we hope, continue to be one of the specialties of a favorite magazine. The subjects dealt with have an out-of-door interest and the illustrations (of which there are nearly one hundred) are quite in symyathy with the text. There are five articles of summer travel; the localities described being Niagara, Colorade, Nova Scotis, the city of Trier on the Mcsel, and Hideand-Seek Town, a New England summer resort of great attractiveness, the true name of which is left to be guessed. John Burroughs writes in his own delightful language about birds, and Miss Bridges, whose bird-paintings have been so much admired in New York, has made her first wood-drawings to illustrate this article. There are two re markable short stories in this number: 'The Living Mummy," by Tourgueneff, the Russian noveliet, which, it is be-lieved, has not before appeared in Eug-lish, and "Crawford's Consistency," by Henry James, jr. Of the serials, "Philip Nolan's Friends," is continued. Bret Harte's "Gabriel Conroy" is concluded this being the tenth installment), and Fannie Hodgson Burnett's "That Lass o' Lowrie's," a story of English mining life, is begun. Among the poetry are

Bryant, both remarkable poems, with as by Mrs. Thaxter, T. B. Aldrich, "H. H.," and others. APPLETON'S JOURNAL in its new and popular monthly form, promises better than we expected. We were so accustomed to the weekly visits of this elegantly printed and always insructive and entertaining magazine, and miss it so sorely that we can hardly reconcile ourselves to a chauge, which, while it brings us four weeks fairly engrossed, leaves a wide gap of thirty days between each issue. Yet, we ought not to grumble with such a table of contents before us as this for the August number, a table that for variety and interest is all that the most exacting reader could ask for, We make room for it, as follows:
